

Aspiring Judge Gets a Head Start on College

When Victoria Kebets was eleven years old, she had the opportunity to sit in on a trial case that changed her life. Sitting in a courtroom, watching judges and lawyers try a case, she was inspired to take up a career in law and started looking into becoming a lawyer.

To do that, she needed a personalized education plan; one that would offer a choice of curriculum, and support her goals. But traditional public schools didn't offer the support Victoria needed, and after a search, Victoria's family found Visions In Education and the support of an experienced teacher and mentor in JeanAnn Walth.

"[My teacher] is inspiring. If she can't find the answer to a question, she refers me to someone who can."

At Visions, Victoria's family was able to choose the curriculum that would support her career ambitions while offering her a flexible environment that allowed her to pursue her interests. Victoria took full advantage of numerous enrichment activities, including piano, voice lessons, and the Find Your Voice writing program.

In her nine years as a Visions student, Victoria demonstrated remarkable initiative and drive, enrolling in American River College when she was just fourteen years old! Because Visions reimburses students for community college classes, Victoria was able to take a number of advanced college courses while still excelling in high school. Thanks to her hard work and focus, Victoria now has a headstart on her college career!

What's Next?

Victoria only has one more year of community college to complete before transferring to a four year university. She intends to pursue a law career and hopes to one day become a judge. When asked about her success, she credits the support of her teacher and family as well as a relaxed environment where she was able to learn at her own pace

"Give homeschooling a try," Victoria said. "Studying at home is a more positive environment."

Learn how to get help with community college!

VisionsInEducation

VisionsInEd

VisionsInEd

VisionsInEducation